Coming Contest over His Financial Schemes in the Reichstag

The result of the coming contest of the financial schemes are more uncertain than those preceding the votes on the army bill and the commercial treaty. The situation is now more complex and variable, but one thing that is now uncertain is the tact possessed by the chancelior and Dr. Miquel in dealing with the political groups. Yesterday's majority for the government on the commercial treaties was less the result of the genuine sentiment of the house than of the skillful manipolation of the parties. It will be a matter of keenest interest to watch the game of the finance developments. The honors of the debates on the commercial treaties rest with the freihurr, Marshall Rieberstein, minister of foreign affairs, who surprised the house with his masterly replies to the agrarian speakers. His lucid exposition of economic principles, his clear statement of statistics, and his apt application thereof to the government's saide of the question strongly helped to fortify the government's position. Chancellor Caprivi was also in good form. His spirits were buoyant. The agrarians were supposed to have been grushed by their defeat.

Struggle Over Russian Treaty.

Tonight the Kreuz Zeitung says the struggle will be renewed over the commercial treaty with Russia. As the government knows that thin will be the last and stiffest feace it will have to take in riding toward its goal, it is making preparations to take it flying. The same not found its equal in giving immediate the left.

The west of the past six months. I find it acts like a charm on the whole nervous system. I have not found its equal in giving immediate the left.

The sentences of the two French spices will be reached by the Germans, except the agrarians, will be concluded about January 21.

The sentences of the two French spices who were tried in Leipnic were known here at 5:20 o'clock this afternoon and who were tried in Leipsic were known here at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon and were approved generally by military men. Some sympathy is felt for the prisoners, as their frankness throughout the trial has shown them to be no hired spies, but men acting up to their ideas of duty.

Sentences May Be Remitted in Part.

The emperor probably will remit part of each sentence, especially if the French departments of war and marine cease sending spies to Germany. As it is, French spies are discovered by German officials almost every week. The plans found upon the two keil spies were displayed in court. They were masterly sketches of the inner works of Bremerhaven and Cuxhaven. Some older hands, still unknown to the German authorities, had supplied the outlines, which the prisoners had verified and filled in France seems to hove perfected a system of skilled espionage.

In Favor of Jesuita Returning.

The Halle Gazette, sometimes officially inspired, says that Prussia will intervene in the federal council in favor of the proposal to repeal the law against the Jesuita. The Prussian ministers maintain absolute silence on the subject, and it is understood are still negotiating with the clerical leaders as regards the conditions of the repeal. The emperor has drawn up a plan of the winter's maneuvers. The garrisons in and around Ferlin will be alarmed and will be hurried on foot and by rail to bivouse in the fields. All the movements of the troops will be within the Grandenburg boundaries. The officers and men who have heard of the plan
are not pleased with it.

London, Dec. 17.—Conservative reports have it that parliament is about to be dissolved on the insue of the local government bill. The ministers are riding for a fail, say the opposition. Several reasons are given for this policy. The cabinet has been pressed into a close corner, owing to the hopelessly backward state of parliamentary business. They dread the rad budget, which the chancellor of the exchequer is about to present. They are torn by internal dissensions. In short, they are in such a deplorable condition generally that they will welcome the and in preference to further attempts to carry out their legislative program. There is in a ferment of preparation for an appeal to the country, yet all this pother has not the smallest busis. There is no indication on the ministerial side that a dissolution is contemplated. Nothing occurring, in public or private, justifies the expectations of the unionate. The ministry really seems to be teaching the house that it is the lamest working tonly in recent British history. Never since the long parliament held Christmas day sittings in 1941, has the house of commons made such a record. The last notable division of the possions will be made next Tuesday on the government's naval policy. The presence the made next Tuesday on the government's naval policy. The prespect has made sore trouble for the unionist whys, who find it impossible to get good representation of the party together. The Irish members now at their house, will return to town in force to support the government. Mr. J. P.
